AUSTRALIAN ECONOMIST CRITICISES SEATO

Hobart, Oct. 21.
Sir Douglas Copland, the Australian economist, tonight criticised the Southeast Asian Treaty Organisation (SEATO) and advocated an Australian foreign policy on Colombo Plan lines, instead of being based on military pacts and defensive measures.

WILL OFFEND

He asked: "Do you think you can build a bridge between East and West by making friends with 150 million and taking a course that offends 1,500 million?"

Sir Douglas Copland, who is principal of the Australian Administrative Staff College, added during a lecture here that Australia would not solve its dilemma by following a policy that would offend both neutrals and nationalists in the Far East when she could not tell what her allies would do at any time.

He also advocated a working recognition of Communist China and the dropping of the name "British" when referring to the Commonwealth of Nations.—Reuter.

'SUICIDE ROCK' CLAIMS ANOTHER LIFE

Monte Carlo, Oct. 21.
The so-called "Suicide Rock" near Monte Carlo Casino, where legend had it that hundreds of unlucky gamblers ended their lives, claimed another victim today.

The body of an Estonian merchant, Ugo Ellsild, aged 60, was found at the bottom of the cliff.

At his home in Monaco a hastily-scribbled note was found saying: "I have just lost a great deal of money and I am sick—I have nothing more to live for."—France-Press.

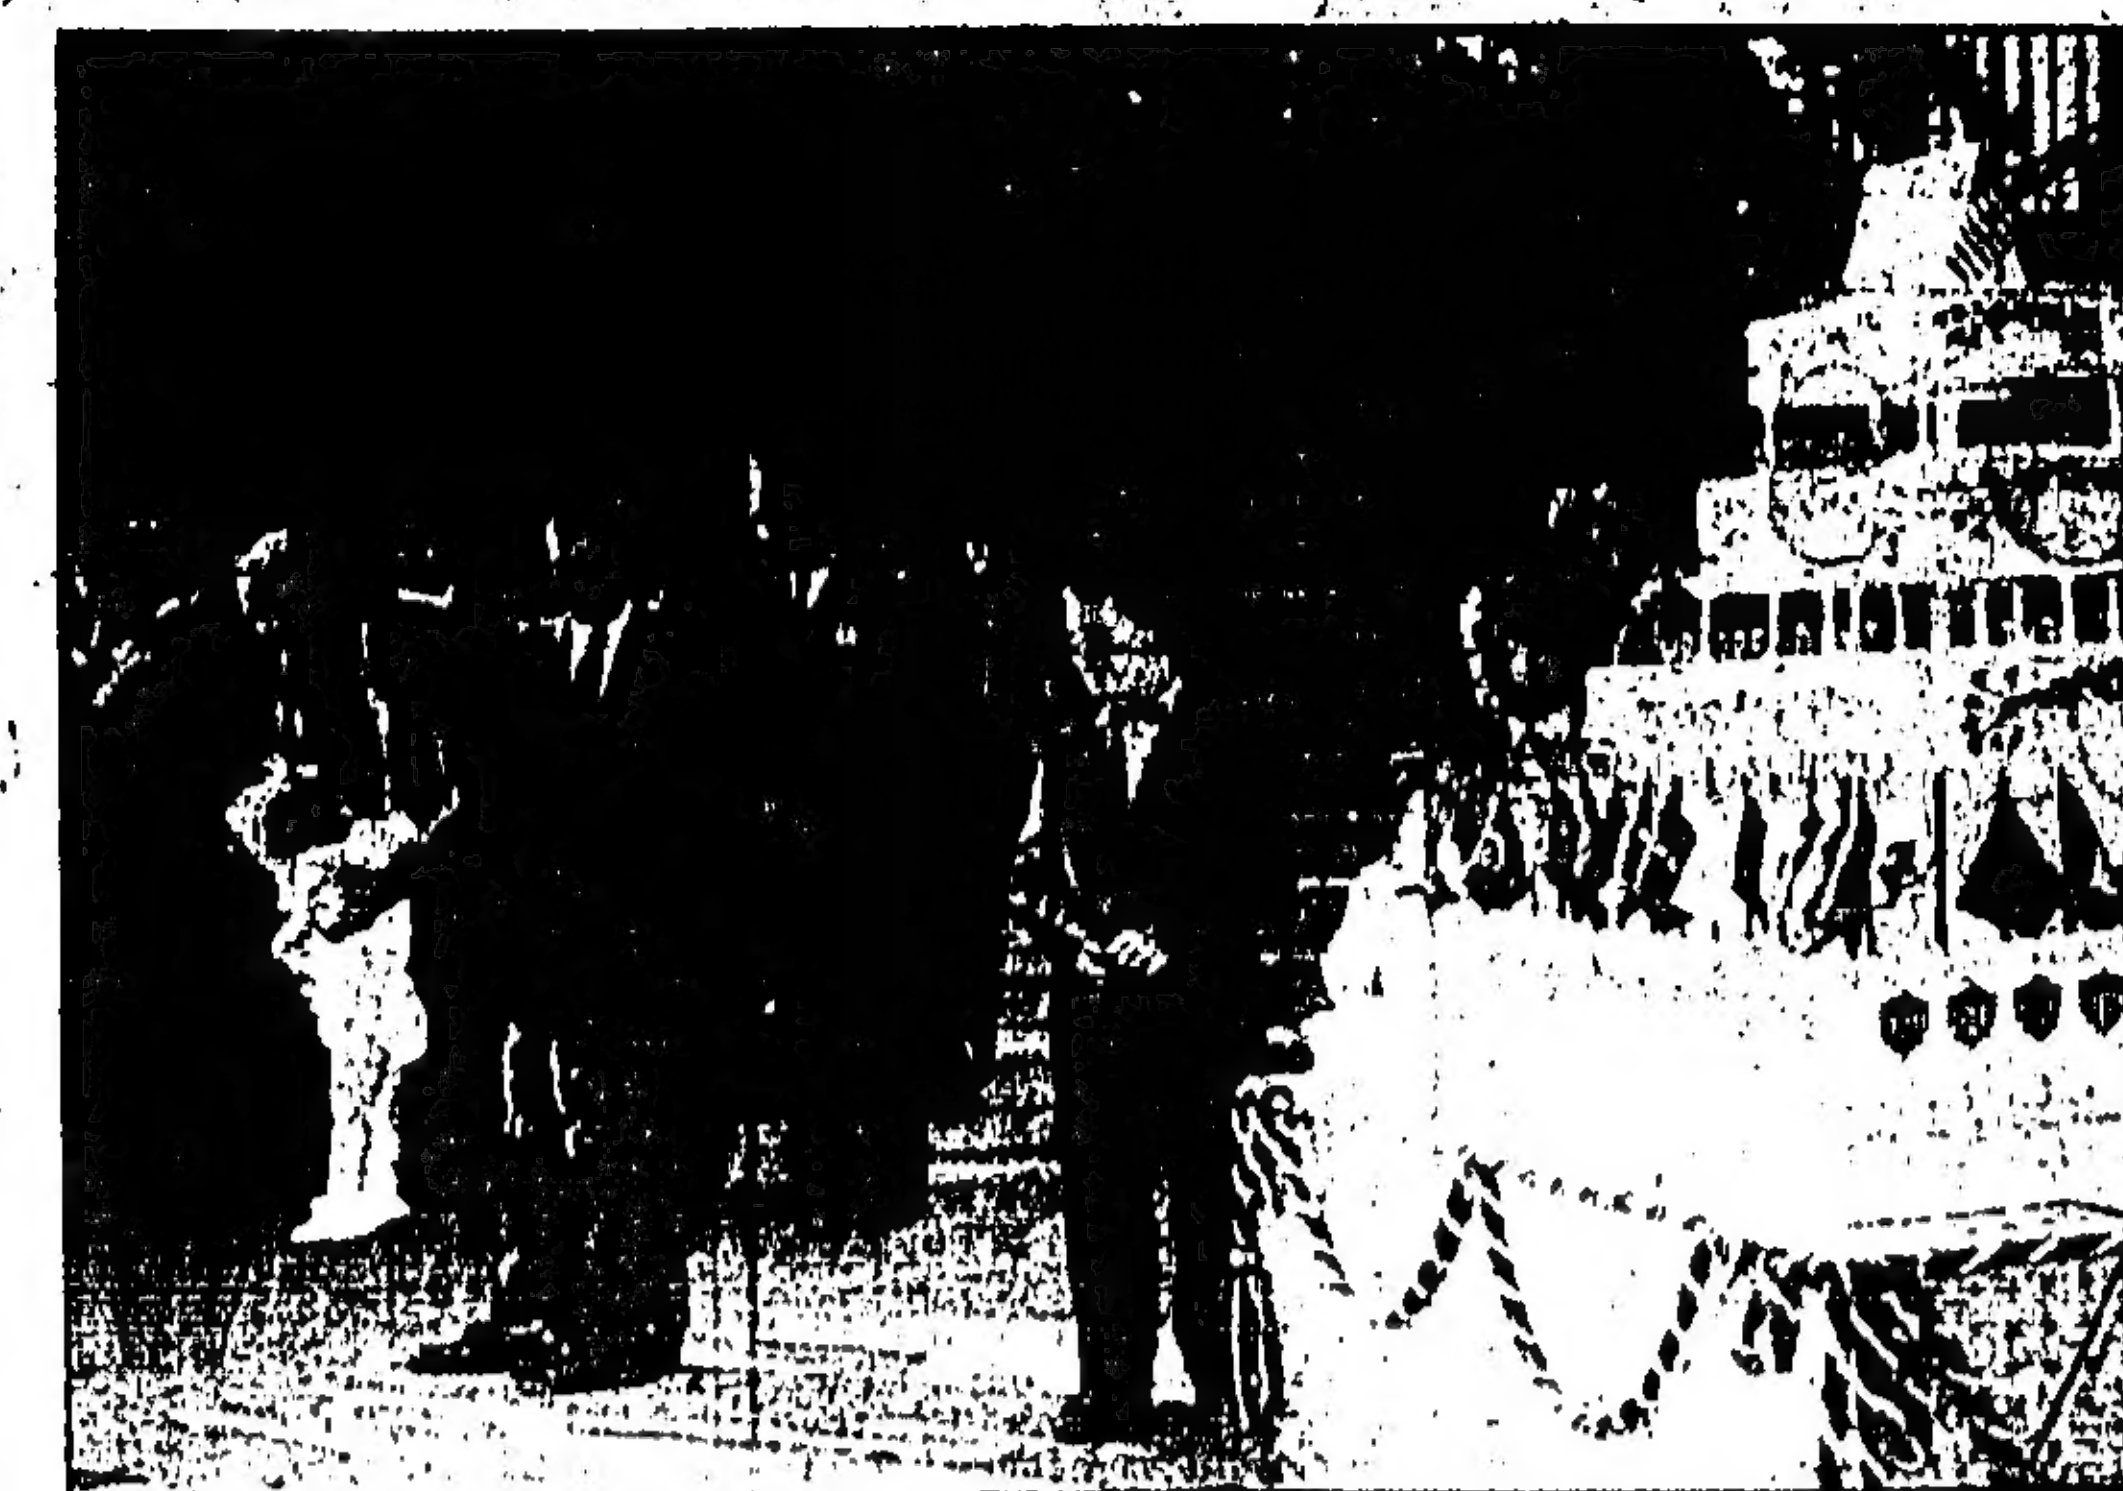

S'pore's New Constitution

Singapore, Oct. 21.
Singapore's new Constitution granting self-government will come into force whether its controversial and subversive clause stays in or not the Chief Minister of the Colony, Mr Lim Yew-hock, said today.

The clause, opposed by all the Colony's political parties, was inserted by the British Colonial Office. It is designed to prevent known subversives from taking part in elections to the first Legislative Assembly under the Constitution.

The Chief Minister said an all-party meeting would be called to work for removal of the clause.—Reuter.

Ike Gets Huge Birthday Cake

OLD LAW SAVES MADAM

Paris, Oct. 21.
A lawyer for a middle-aged woman accused of operating a luxurious "call girl" establishment in a fashionable flat today won a postponement of prosecution by citing a law dating back to 1791.

Two detectives raided the flat, caught five pretty girls in evening dress there, and seized a record book with dozens of girl names, specifying the colour of their hair, measurements, languages they spoke and other information.

As a result, the woman was charged with operating a clandestine disorderly house.

IT WAS ILLEGAL

But Maître Charles Carboni, one of France's top criminal lawyers, argued that the raid was illegal.

He maintained, "The detectives entered my client's home by virtue of a decree of July 19, 1791, which authorises police officers to enter places where debauchery is notorious. There was no notoriety involved, and the proof of this is that the police only found out about it through a confidential tip."

"Therefore, the police should have a warrant and the search was illegal, null and void, and my client must be freed."

The court took the matter under advisement for later ruling.—France-Press.

BI-LINGUAL OPERA

Chicago, Oct. 21.
Opera lovers were hard put to follow the libretto of Ambrose Thomas' lyric opera "Mignon" on Saturday when a new tenor joined the cast.

Tenor Alvino Misciano sang in Italian; the rest of the cast sang in French.—United Press.

Rabbit From Space?

POLICE CALLED IN TO PROBE DUBLIN MYSTERY

London, Oct. 21.
A dead rabbit found on the doorstep of a Dublin house today led to a spate of rumours in the Irish capital that the animal might have fallen from an exploding rocket.

The London evening newspaper, The Star, splashed on its front page a report that the "rabbit from space" had started a first-class mystery in the Irish capital.

The newspaper said that soon after an aerial explosion had been heard over a wide area of the city, a woman living in the Black Rock District found the rabbit.

It was still alive when she found it though badly injured in the legs and was quite dry although heavy rain had fallen shortly before its discovery.

Police were called and examined the ground nearby but could find no footprints or bloodstains and it was suggested the rabbit must have been dropped on the spot where it was found.

The Star said experts were called to the scene and telephone calls made to London. Both the Air Ministry and the Ministry of Supply, the two government departments who might be concerned in such an incident, said they knew nothing about it.

Dublin police dismissed the suggestion that the rabbit might have fallen from an exploding rocket as "bonanza." They thought that the reported "explosion" might have been the sound of a forklift from a ship at sea.—China Mail Special.

PRINCE PHILIP AND GROMYKO DISCUSS THE SPUTNIK

United Nations, Oct. 21.
The "Sputnik" made a surprise "appearance" at the United Nations today during a conversation between Britain's Prince Philip and Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko.

The Soviet minister and his wife had been presented to Queen Elizabeth and the Prince during a brief reception for the royal couple following an address by the Queen to the United Nations General Assembly.

GESTURE

Prince Philip, who has closely followed recent developments in the conquest of space, lingered with Gromyko a few minutes after they were introduced.

During their conversation, Prince Philip made a semi-circular gesture with his hands—which the Soviet Minister quickly completed to indicate the course of his country's "Sputniks."—France-Press.

PAULETTE GODDARD TO MARRY

Dayton, Ohio, Oct. 21.
Actress Paulette Goddard said today that she was to be married to author Erich Maria Remarque "sometime in the future."

The motion picture star denied a report that they had been married secretly. She said that no date had been set for the wedding.

Miss Goddard is here to appear in the stage play, "The Walk of the Treaders," in which she co-stars with Melvyn Douglas.

Miss Goddard, who said she was 40, was engaged to the German-born author who was running into his fifth year.

"I believe in long engagement," she said. "The longer the better. Reports like that come out about every six months. The last one came from Mexico."—United Press.

While She's Still Going Strong

Moscow, Oct. 21.
The Soviet earth satellite will have circled the world more than 250 times by 0300 hours GMT tomorrow, the Soviet News Agency Tass reported today.

It will have travelled a total of almost seven million miles, the Agency added.

The rocket carrier will tomorrow evening precede the satellite by 46 minutes or about 13,000 miles.—Reuter.

Still A Long Way To Go

Pittsburgh, Oct. 21.
US Major David Simons, who reached a height of 100,000 feet in a balloon in August, said that scientists still did not have the necessary knowledge to send a man-controlled rocket into space.

Simons said that during his ascent he had to fight to remain alive most of the time.

He added, however, that the launching of the Soviet artificial satellite had proven that interplanetary journeys no longer belonged to the dream world.—France-Press.

Destroyers Reduced

Jerusalem, Oct. 21.
Great Britain has decided to reduce from five to three the number of destroyers she will send on a courtesy visit to the Israeli port of Haifa, it was learned here today.

A spokesman for the Israeli Foreign Ministry said that, on learning of the decision, his government "understood perfectly the British point of view in the present period."

CHANNEL TUNNEL: MONTY SAYS "NO"

'Would Weaken Britain Strategically'

London, Oct. 21. Field Marshal Bernard Montgomery, Deputy Supreme Commander of NATO Forces, today opposed the idea of a tunnel under the English Channel.

Speaking at a banquet marking the anniversary of the Battle of Trafalgar, the Field Marshal said that "strategically, it would weaken this country."

Alcohol Deaths: One Every 30 Minutes

Paris, Oct. 21. One Frenchman dies every half an hour as a victim of alcoholism, the Count de Fumey, of the "French Pressing Committee" declared today.

He made this statement in presenting the Committee's award to Andre Bertrand, President of the National Committee for Defence Against Alcoholism.

The Count maintained that the aim of the committee was not to convert the French to water drinking but simply to remind them that there were limits to the use of alcoholic beverages.

He said that alcoholism cost the French Treasury 215,000 million francs (about US$40,000,000) annually.

The committee contends that people may safely drink up to one and a half pints of wine daily.—France-Press.

COLOMBO PLAN CONFERENCE

Japan Explains The Asian Development Fund

Saigon, Oct. 21. The Japanese Vice-Premier, Mr. Mitsujiro Ishii, today explained the Japanese-sponsored Asian Development Fund to the afternoon session of the Colombo Plan conference, conference sources reported afterwards.

The sources said he assured delegates from other Asian countries that the plan did not compete with the Colombo Plan, but was complementary to it.

According to Japanese sources, Japan and West Germany are the only two countries which have so far agreed to put money forward for a fund to finance Asian harvests, exports, imports and long-range developments.

Mekong River

Mr C. V. Narasimhan, executive secretary of the Economic Commission for Asia and the Far East—United Nations subsidiary—explained the four-nation scheme for research on development possibilities of the Mekong River.

South Vietnam, Cambodia, Laos and Thailand last month agreed to co-operate on the scheme.

Mr Narasimhan is believed to have put forward the scheme as a good one for Colombo Plan help, but the sources said he did not make any direct appeal for aid to the meeting.

Meanwhile, Mr Richard Casey, Australian Minister for External Affairs, said today that Australia might have to consider setting a ceiling within the next two or three years on the number of Colombo Plan students she could take.

He said Australian universities in particular were showing signs of overcrowding.

He said Australia at present had 850 Colombo Plan students, but there were far outnumbered by the 4,000 Asian students who were studying there by private arrangement.

High Total

He said at present four per cent of the total enrolments in the universities were for Asian students, which was a higher total than for any other Western country.

Asked if Australia would favour setting up higher educational institutions in the Colombo Plan region, Mr Casey said: "We would certainly be willing to consider aid of that sort under which we could send instructors and experts to schools and educational institutions in Asia."—Reuter.

Thai Gov't's Ban On Remittances

Bangkok, Oct. 21. The Thai Government has revoked permits issued to 12 "remittance agencies" handling the remittance of money from Thailand to China, it was learned here today.

The power of approving remittances to China which amount to nearly HK$1,000,000 monthly, has now been given to the "Thailand Trust Corporation."

A police official informed concerned authorities that the government after thorough investigation had found many "irregularities" in foreign exchange dealings and had substantial proof of illegal activities of the 12 remittance agencies.

While money could be remitted to China through commercial exchange banks after approval by the Bank of Thailand, a large number of illiterate Chinese usually remit money through remittance agencies.—France-Press.

Beat Police At 000 And XXX

Melbourne, Oct. 21. An appeal court judge today quashed the conviction of a man who beat two policemen at night and crossed after he had been defined as a charge of drunken driving.

Judge Mitchell said he was satisfied that the driver was under the influence of drink at the time, but could not be satisfied that he was incapable of having proper control of his car.—China Mail Special.

ACTOR ON MORALS CHARGE

Tel Aviv, Oct. 21.

Well-known Hungarian actor Zoltan Greguss, whose arrest on a morals charge led to a diplomatic incident between Israel and Hungary, will again be questioned by an examining magistrate tomorrow.

He was arrested on September 10, accused of improper behaviour with a 12-year-old girl who went to Greguss' hotel to ask for his autograph.

He was released on bail on September 17, but ordered to remain in Israel.

The Hungarian government, taking reprisals for Greguss' arrest, demanded that Israel should recall three members of her legation in Budapest.

Hungary also pressed for Greguss' repatriation.—France-Press.

Hungarian Refugee — A Planted Communist Spy?

London, Oct. 21.

The London "Daily Herald" reported today that a 21-year-old Hungarian diplomat who defected to the West really was a planted Communist spy.

The newspaper said in a front-page story that Istvan Adam, who had returned to Hungary, probably "will step into the spotlight" next Wednesday, the anniversary of the Hungarian uprising.

It said the Hungarian government hopes that Adam "will prove a powerful propagandist against new demonstrations—if the students can be hoodwinked into believing he is genuine."

Adam, a private secretary to the Hungarian Charge d'Affaires in London, deserted to the West last July. He said he was "disillusioned with Communism."

"UNFORTUNATE MISTAKE"

"His orders, it is believed, were to stay under cover in case his pose was discovered by genuine refugees," the paper said, pointing out he had not contacted any refugee organisations.

"And he was to return before October 23—Wednesday."

Last Saturday the legation said Adam "on his own initiative, had asked for permission to return to Hungary," The Herald said.

"He expressed his regret for leaving the legation and added that it was the most unfortunate mistake he had made in his life," the paper quoted the legation as saying.

It added that a Home Office official said the British authorities "have no power or wish to prevent any alien leaving this country if he wishes to do so."—United Press.

Trade Fair In Singapore

Singapore, Oct. 21.

An international trade fair will be held in Singapore next year.

Mr R. Razak, manager of Singapore's Great World park where it is intended to hold the fair, said foreign countries would be invited to take part, and consulates in the Colony would be asked to help.—Reuter.

"Many Would Survive A Nuclear War"

London, Oct. 21.

An assertion that six to nine hydrogen bombs would wipe out life in the British Islands was rejected tonight by Miss Pat Hornsby-Smith, Joint Under-Secretary of State, Home Office, as an irresponsible statement "that is just not true."

She said that it will be clear to anyone who looks at the facts dispassionately that, however heavy a nuclear attack, great numbers of people would survive and many would need help.

To claim, therefore, that nuclear war would be the end of these islands is to shrug off the issue we all have to face.

She added that "certainly we should lose, perhaps for a generation, much that makes life worth living. Our ordeal would be extreme. But many of us would live."—France-Press.

EMERGENCY OP. . . Continuing a drama of modern surgery

Where you'll watch this fight for life

DRAWN BY
ROBB
AND REPORTED BY
MERRICK WINN

THE registrar said: "It's going to be bad," and the Chief said: "Yes, it certainly is." They meant that Operation Sarah would be long and difficult and probably dangerous.

In 99 per cent of modern major operations the patient has a 99 per cent chance of recovery. Sarah had a 70 per cent chance.

Not bad, not good. So every minute counted. Operate at once, or in hours she would die.

A porter helped to take her from her bed and then he wheeled her through the solemn ward to the lift. The other patients watched, thinking.

'I'm scared'

A WARD NURSE went too, and a doctor. The nurse carried the saline-drip bottle still attached by its tube to the hollow needle in Sarah's arm.

The doctor carried two pint bottles of blood.

It should have been three. But there is a shortage of blood, through a shortage of donors, and many hospitals have less than they need.

Sarah, as it turned out, could have done with four bottles. She

The only words spoken are vital ones . . .

THE terseness of urgency is the only sound now as the green-robed team sets to work. In the foreground, the anaesthetist, key man to success, prepares his injections. Behind, a mask goes on the patient. An almost robot discipline rules. . .

had to have blood substitutes, which, developed in recent years, are a fair second-best.

The ward nurse with her, a kid of 18, looked upset. Perhaps because bottled blood has a "head" on it and because this was her first major operation.

The others? The Chief, the anaesthetist, senior registrar or No. 2 surgeon, house surgeon, house anaesthetist, a student theatre sister, two staff nurses, three student nurses.

All wore masks and caps and white rubber boots; and the men wore gowns and the nurses gowns or short-sleeved coats. Not white, but dark green, because green is less tiring to the eyes.

No one wore much under-neath. It was to be hot under the 500-watt lamp above the table. This was, very truly, to be a scene of blood, and sweat, and toil, with the threat of tears.

Now the time was near. This was the crisis. These were the moments when Sarah was so very near to dying.

A shrug

THE anaesthetist fixed a mask to Sarah's face, turning the knobs of two cylinders painted black and white for oxygen, blue for nitrous oxide (laughing gas). This was the general anaesthetic.

The Chief and all taking actual part in the operation "scrubbed up" and pulled on rubber gloves. And the work began.

The time was 11 minutes past 5. At 5.40 the Chief and the registrar both straightened. They looked at one another.

The registrar shrugged, saying nothing.

And the Chief said: "Fraid so."

TOMORROW The mastery of the Chief

Not so long ago she would have gone straight to the theatre for the preliminary anaesthetic. She would have seen the table, a bleak sight; she would have seen the scalpels, the forceps, the clamps, the swabs, and she would have been afraid.

Now the patient sees nothing. Sarah was to go into the theatre asleep and come out asleep. She was to have one of the severest operations in the book and not even know what an operating theatre looks like.

Some people still think of the anaesthetist merely as a sort of surgeon's "mate." Wrong. The success of an operation may depend on him even more than on the surgeon.

Anaesthetists and surgeons often pair off, becoming known as "partners." The anaesthetist in Sarah's case, a world authority and a pioneer in anaesthetic methods, has been working with the Chief for nearly 30 years.

Now he looked at Sarah, slipped a hypodermic needle into her arm almost casually and said: "What are you grinning at?"

Ready

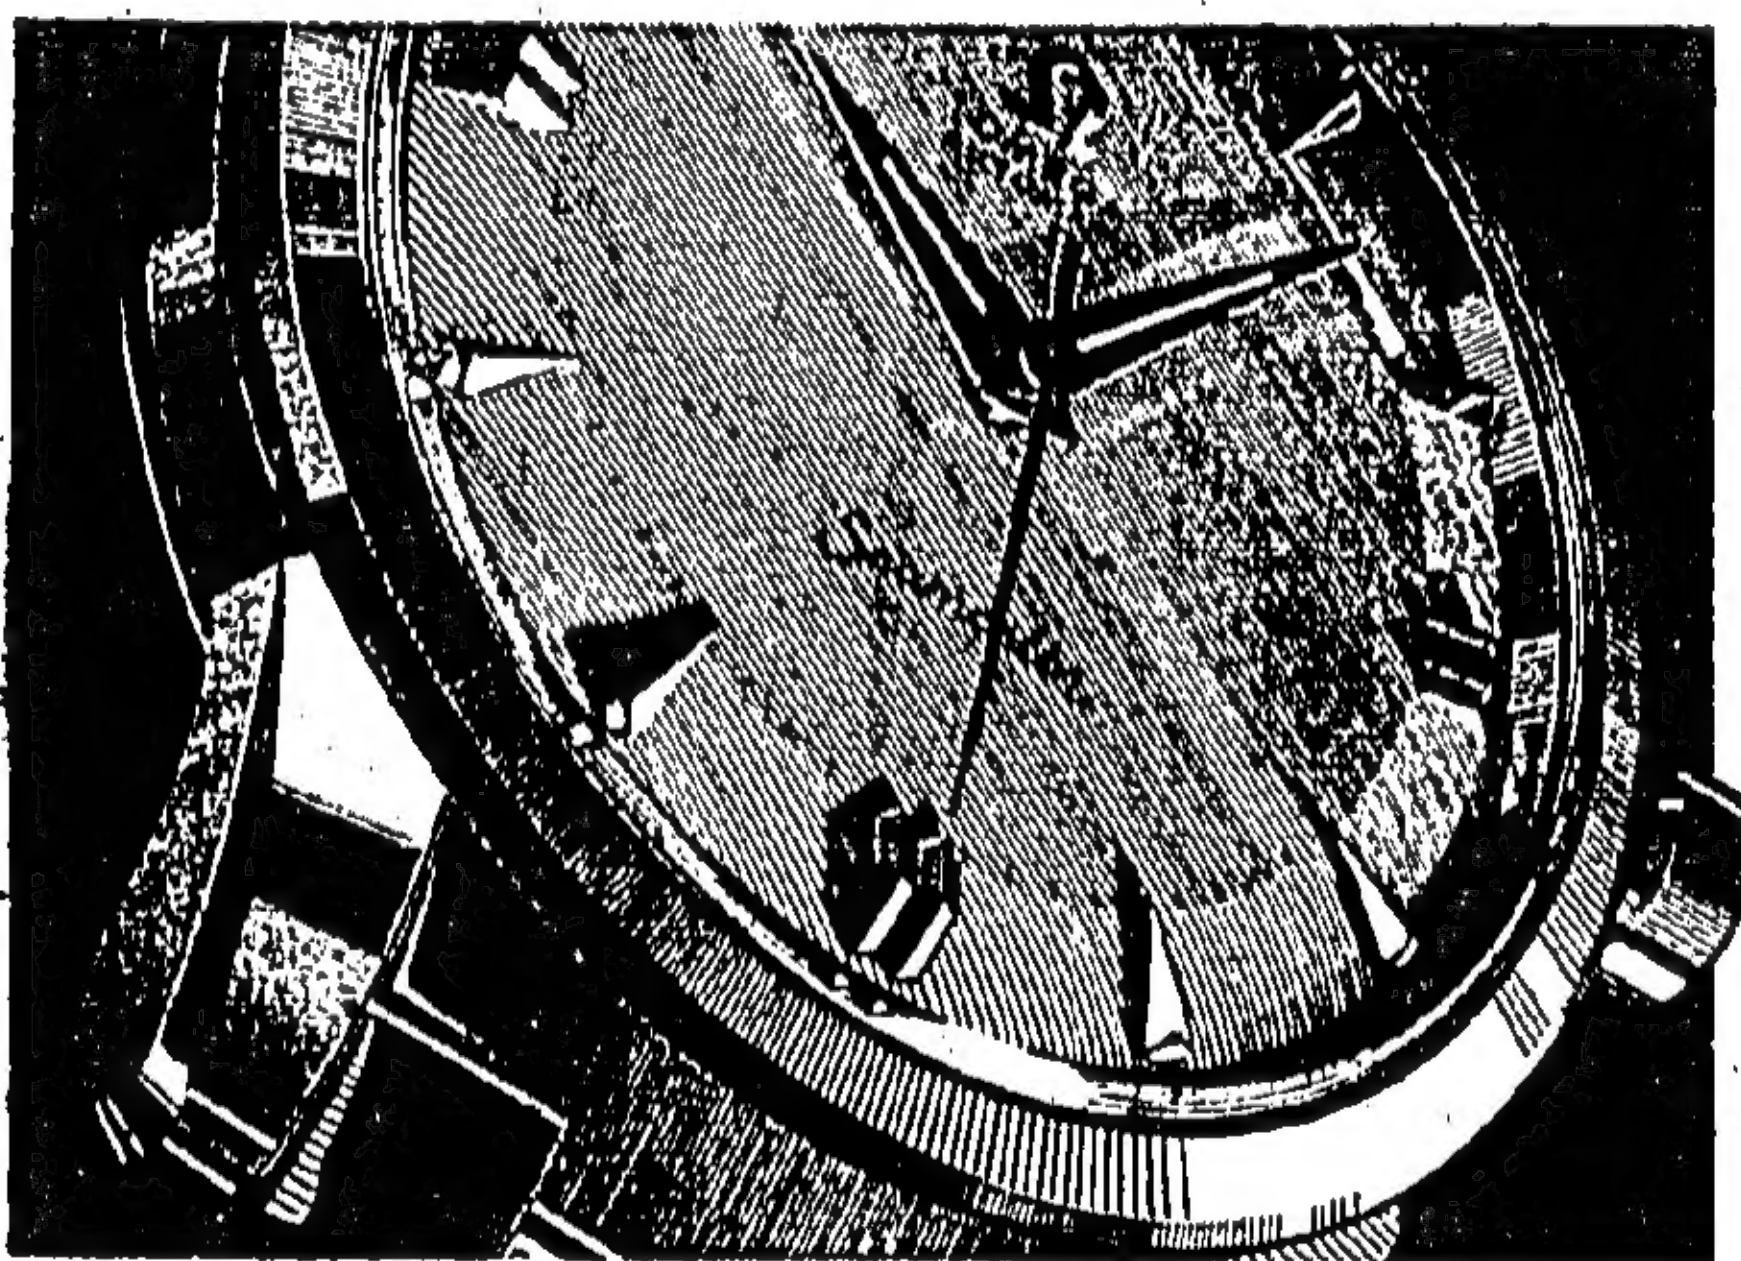

SARAH mumbled: "I . . . I . . . and that was as far as she got. Her eyelids fell shut like a doll's, not even flickering. Out—in five seconds flat.

She was now ready for the theatre. The porter wheeled her in, followed by the uneasy nurse still holding the saline drip. Both were masked, and wore caps and gowns.

Yes, the porter too. He belonged to the team that was trying to save Sarah. He was the 18th member.

THE FOUR MEN FROM MOSCOW

by

Victor Feather

ASSISTANT SEC.
OF THE T.U.C.

OUR 1957 Congress ended on September 6. It was held at Blackpool, a seaside resort on the north-west coast of England. Over a thousand delegates attended. They represented every union affiliated to the TUC, a total of 8,400,000 members.

In the public balcony on each of the five days were seated another thousand people drawn from the general public who were there as interested visitors; there were also observers from Government departments, great industrial concerns and foreign governments. In addition there were 250 Press men and representatives of radio and television.

Among the observers were four diplomats whose faces grew more gloomy as the week progressed. They were from the Soviet Embassy in London, sent by their Government to report what was happening at Blackpool in this great industrial parliament of Britain, the British TUC.

Why was their gloomy spirit so obvious? Perhaps because the ludicrously small stogie organisation of the Soviet Union in Britain, the Communist Party, was getting a more severe chastisement than it has received for many a long year; and that is saying a lot, because Communist spokesmen have never received much support from people like the miners, the textile workers, the steelworkers, the transport workers and all the other representative organisations, large and small, which make up the British Trade Union Movement.

Tight Lipped

The thirty or so members of the Communist Party among the union delegates have learned to be thick-skinned in the past because of the many rebuffs they got. They had little to say for themselves at this Congress. So perhaps now they have learned how to be tight-lipped.

They have good reason to be so. Since their shameful support of Soviet aggression against Hungary, the Communist Party in Britain has lost almost a quarter of its membership. Its membership of 35,000 is down to a mere 20,000, and among those who have left the Communists are many men who have been members of the Party for almost half their lives. Young men with some idealism, who had believed false Communist propaganda and thought the Communist Party fought for the oppressed, were staggered and shaken when they heard the excuses put forward by the Communist leadership to absolve the blatant aggression and oppression of the Soviet Union against Hungary. Others, who had thought that Marxism was the basis of the Communist Party's ideology, were shocked into resignation when they realised that Soviet foreign policy alone is the basis of national Communist Party policy in all countries in the world.

The ancient professional leadership of the Communist Party here in Britain, of course, has not resigned. It is an aged leadership, with most of its national leaders climbing steadily into the 65 and 70-year-old age group, with no young leaders coming up to replace them. There are many people who believe that this aged Communist leadership has not resigned simply because they have no energy left to take up their pens to write.

Although Communist membership in the British Trade Union Movement has always been small, the thirty or forty Communists who are delegates to the TUC have been very vocal in

Why were the four men from Moscow so gloomy at the recent TUC Congress? The reason was that the tiny British Communist Party and Soviet policy came in for severe punishment than they have received for many years.

past years. This year they were as quiet as mice, perhaps thinking that if they made little noise they would not be noticed. They thought it wisest to take shelter against the storm of angry trade union opinion in Britain about the violation of Hungary's freedom a few short months ago.

Free Speech

So, therefore, no disciplined Communist spokesman at the Congress dared to challenge the action which the General Council of the TUC have taken during the year to assist the unfortunate victims of Khrushchev's brutality. But one life-long member of the Communist Party went to the rostrum to speak in support of Soviet aggression. He is well-known in Britain as a man on whom even rigid Communist discipline has little effect. He is a contradiction in himself. He is an individualistic Communist. The statements he made were orthodox enough from a Soviet point of view. It was like a gramophone record of Khrushchev's grandiose speech of the Soviet Government's lies about the massacre in Budapest. And the delegates let him know, in no uncertain manner, of their strong disapproval of his statements. Nevertheless, he was given a full opportunity of addressing the Congress and the interrupters, who were so incensed at the hypocrisy of the statements he was making, were the ones to speak. The answer, he said, could be given by other delegates who wished also to avail themselves of this democratic and traditional method of free speech in the British TUC.

Criticism

The faces of the four Soviet diplomats in the public gallery grew more gloomy still as they gazed with their own eyes that here was the most representative body of work-people in any part of the world expressing horror and disgust at the actions of the Soviet Government against the attempt of workers in Hungary to throw off the Soviet thralldom and establish a free and independent democratic State.

There was another lesson there in Blackpool for the four men from Moscow. They saw that in Britain a spokesman of the Communist Party is given the right to speak his mind and is protected in that right by people who detest what he says. In later discussions of different topics delegates went on the rostrum to express their strong disapproval of decisions of the British Government. But has anyone ever heard of a Soviet spokesman daring to go on the rostrum at any conference of any kind in the Soviet Union to denounce the Soviet Government?

SEMINOLES EXTEND WINNING STREAK TO SEVENTEEN GAMES

Down Wah Ying 13-6 In Junior League Game

By "TIME OUT"

Fresh from their triumph over their bitter rivals, the Cheyennes, on Sunday last, Ed Carvalho's pennant-bound Seminoles extended their winning streak to 17 games since they first joined the Men's Junior League at the start of the 1956/57 season when they ran out easy winners against Wah Ying in the first of two League games played off yesterday, scoring 13 runs and conceding 6 to the opposition.

In the only other softball game of the day, the listless Cheyennes, still smarting from their defeat at the hands of the champion Seminoles, almost paid the penalty for underestimating the fighting qualities of Yee Jick-fai's War Eagles as only poor finishing prevented the Eagles from pulling off an upset in a game which the Cheyennes just managed to win by 18 runs to 14.

Regular Seminoles starting pitcher Ed Carvalho, resting on his laurels, turned over the mound chores to Ray Pucheco. Playing errorless ball, the Seminoles blanked their opponents for four innings whilst their heavy artillery opened up on Wah Ying hurler K. W. Chang and the scoreboard registered 11 runs before the champs eased up.

Six runs were let in during the top of the sixth inning as the Seminoles relaxed their vigilance. Just to make doubly sure, the tribe added two more runs to bring the final tally to 13 and to bring the morning's proceedings to a close.

For the Seminoles Klondike Wong and Robert Graen caught the eye with some heavy hitting work, the former connecting for a perfect 4 in 4 which included two triples, a double and single while Graen poked out a tremendous homer to left-field in the opening inning.

Noticeable Display

The Cheyennes had players in unfamiliar positions when they took the field overconfidently against the War Eagles. This show of bravado quickly gave way to a noticeable display of what is commonly referred to as "the 18ers" when the War Eagles jumped to an 8-4 lead in the first three innings. The score was tied at 11-all at the end of the 5th inning. Both sides scored a run each in the next inning but in the final chapter the Cheyennes took advantage of 5 walks to score six more runs to bring their total to 18 whilst the best the War Eagles could do was to notch up a pair.

The winners had to contest this game inning by inning as a stubborn Eagles' defence refused to give ground and but for the atrocious finishing of the losers a different story would have been told.

Canada Cup Competitors Turn In Under Par 68s

Tokyo, Oct. 21. Harold Horning and Gary Player of South Africa and Stan Leonard of Canada, turned in the best scores, all four under par 68, at the first day's official practice at Kasumigaseki today.

All competitors today went to the Kasumigaseki Country Club's course, 50 miles north of Tokyo, to practice for the International Trophy and Canada Cup tournament, due to begin on Thursday.

The Americans, Sam Snead and Jimmy Demaret, made off to the nearby Tokyo Golf Club's course for a "secret" practice.

The three Commonwealth golfers' practice scores today equaled the official course record.

On Friday Sam Snead bettered the course record with a six under par 66 on his first practice on the course.—Reuter.

I HAVE MY SAY COME OFF YOUR LITTLE ROCK, JACK SOLOMONS

By HARRY CARPENTER

What an outrageous and untimely step Mr Jack Solomons takes! Recently he announced, not without pride, that he was applying to have the Willie Pastrano-Dick Richardson fight on October 22 "officially and universally recognised for the WHITE Heavyweight Championship of the World."

Floyd Patterson, the reigning champion, is, of course, an American Negro. Mr Solomons told me himself he could see nothing wrong with his idea.

EVERYTHING IS WRONG WITH IT!

I thought the obnoxious notion of emphasising the colour of a man's skin as a promotional gimmick had long since died an unlamented death in Britain. It would be a retrograde move to resurrect it at any time.

To do so when the fever over Little Rock, Arkansas, has yet to abate smacks either of colossal ignorance or complete disregard for good taste.

Inflammatory

Once upon a time hard-bolled fight promoters, stuck for a publicity stunt, signed up a white and coloured rivals so that they could flaunt the inflammatory banner, "Black v. White."

Such hideous practices have long since been stamped out by the British Boxing Board of Control. I shall be shocked if their attitude to Solomons's application is not one of complete repugnance.

Solomons significantly reaches well back into the past for his precedent. He says:

"There is nothing new about this business of having a champion defined by colour. In 1935 I saw Larry Gains and Olie Walker fight in Leicester for what was called the coloured heavyweight championship. They even wore white gloves. I think it's a good idea."

I wonder—does Mr Solomons consider it a good idea for fighters to be segregated as they are in South Africa at the present time?

To take just one example: Little Zulu Juke Tuli had to come here to win the Empire

flyweight title from a white man, Teddy Gardner.

Discrimination

Discrimination by colour is deplorable no matter where or how it occurs, and Mr Solomons does not make his case any better by saying:

"We must not bring colour or politics into boxing, but every world heavyweight these days seems to be a Negro and if we can get a white champion, then he would automatically be in line for a crack at Floyd Patterson."

Mr Solomons is Jewish. How extraordinary it is to hear such abysmal arguments from a member of a people who, above all others, have been martyred by race prejudice throughout the centuries.

NOW JACK SOLOMONS HAS A SAY

HARRY CARPENTER'S stinging attack on Jack Solomons's White Heavyweight Championship proposal was like a blow under the heart to the promoter. He replies:

Dear Harry—I have carefully read your article headlined "I Have My Say." How misleading some of your statements can be!

I would dearly love to "Have My Say" but unfortunately even after this letter, you can still have the final word, as you have the column, and not me.

You say: "I wonder—does Mr Solomons consider it a good idea for fighters to be segregated as they are in South Africa?"

How misleading, Harry! There is no segregation in my mind. Remember, only as recently as September 17: Erskine v. Cooper, Turpin v. Boulgroune, and Pompey v. Sullivan! Is that your idea of segregation?

You go on: "discrimination by colour is deplorable, no matter where or how it occurs." I could not agree with you more. Did I not match Ray Robinson and Randy Turpin Archie Moore, and Volande Pompey—both in world title fights? Is that your idea of my colour bar, Harry?

I have never had a colour bar in my whole life and do not intend to start now.

In view of this explanation, I think your last paragraph disgusting, and in bad taste.

Yours sincerely,
JACK SOLOMONS.

'No Segregation'

How misleading, Harry! There is no segregation in my mind. Remember, only as recently as September 17: Erskine v. Cooper, Turpin v. Boulgroune, and Pompey v. Sullivan! Is that your idea of segregation?

You go on: "discrimination by colour is deplorable, no matter where or how it occurs." I could not agree with you more. Did I not match Ray Robinson and Randy Turpin Archie Moore, and Volande Pompey—both in world title fights? Is that your idea of my colour bar, Harry?

In view of this explanation, I think your last paragraph disgusting, and in bad taste.

JACK SOLOMONS.

France—Latest Country To Ban Sponge Bat

Effective After June 30

Paris, Oct. 21. France is the latest country to ban the sponge table tennis bat.

The French Table Tennis Federation announced today that it has forbidden its players to use this type of bat until after June 30 next year.

This step has been taken on the suggestion of the International Federation to play a season without sponge.

Several European countries have fallen into line and it is thought that if a majority of nations ban the bat, sponge will disappear from the game. "We are afraid we shall not obtain a majority but, nevertheless, we are giving it a trial," said an official of the French federation.—China Mail Special.

WILLIE PASTRANO

WILLIE WOWS 'EM DOWN SOHO WAY

London. Willie Pastrano, from way down yonder in New Orleans, ambled through the strangely quiet acres of deepest Soho the other day looking more like a 1,000-dollar student tourist than a man whose intentions are strictly confined to beating out 'heavyweight' Dick Richardson at Harringway today.

It was Willie, the well-dressed man, who made the odd bystander stop and look back. Because Willie is a distinctly natty dresser.

Maybe his dark blue, single button suit with its red flecks and cloth buttons would not have been well received in Savile-row but down in Soho it was a wow. So were Willie's black and white plaited shoes.

In fact it was pretty hard to get down to Pastrano the fighter. Pastrano rated the fourth most lethal man in the world. Now if Pastrano had come here to sing notes instead of swing punches, Willie would have had the teenagers screaming their silly heads off.

You see, Willie carries none of the battered trade marks of his cauliflowering calling. With his Marlon Brando hair-do and his dark Italian good looks he looks like something from Hollywood rather than the maul house of Madison Square.

Anyhow, Pastrano would never have been a fighter had not his papa Frankie been the best chef in all New Orleans, the undisputed minestrone champion, the top man in spaghetti and on his own as master of ravioli.

And Willie carried right on. 52 fights, five draws, five defeats, and a record of never having dusted the ring with the seat of his pants.

Willie is not one of your dynamite, destructive, hit-it-if-it-moves Americans. He is rated a British stylist, the fastest heavyweight in the world, the man who spars with featherweights because he might catch cold with the bulkier boys.

And Willie knows all about the British rules of boxing. He says with an endearing bland air: "I just know all your rules. I've been brain-washed for this expedition."

Family Man

And he needs no nudge to get talking about his family: "I've got a millionaire's family, a boy and a girl. And that boy has me out every Sunday."

He's in the gym and he's only two, that man Janny. You can see him, just a speck, throwing punches among all the busy boys. But I reckon that the bum's going to be a southpaw!

If Pastrano is half as entertaining in the ring I am looking forward to October 22. Of Richardson, he says: "I only know he has two hands and he's rough and tough. I talked to him on the phone this morning and he seems like a nice sort of fellow."

THE experiments being made—and watched breathlessly by hat-haters—to find out the connection between hat-wearing and baldness lack imagination. The Grampound Experiment is fresh in the public memory. It resulted in the startling announcement that if a man is kept in a hat, day and night, for long enough, say, 40 years, he will begin to go bald. It was also found that sleeping in a hat until one is accustomed to it, affects the nerves, which, in turn, affect the normal growth of the hair. It has been suggested that that postman would make a good guinea-pig, but his fiancée, Gertrude, Moll, will not hear of such a thing, and his mother said: "Arnold has done enough for Science. YOUR BIRTHDAY ... By STELLA

TUESDAY, OCTOBER 22

BORN today, you have a tremendous store of energy and abundance. You approach life with dramatic verve and fire that you tend to wear yourself out. You are time to time, you take "breathers" to relax your nervous tensions. Your physical stamina is not as great as you believe it to be, and your mind wears out your body.

You must have life and activity about you at all times. You are a busy person. You live and work in the city where there is always a great deal going on. You are a great deal of nature and the country, but a few visits during the busy spring and summer weather and another in the autumn are about all that your temperament can stand. The most pastoral life is do-ably for you.

Your emotions are near the surface and it is likely that you will have more than one romance during your lifetime. In fact, you of the fair sex may be rather more flirtatious than is wise. You like to keep a string of admirers without making any selection at all. You may delay things so long that you may get left behind. Although you may think you have fallen in love at first sight, it is wiser to give marriage that long, second thought.

It is likely that the stage will offer a highly successful career. In any event, your life is very sure to be a lively and exciting one, for you seem to attract the unusual wherever you go.

Among those born on this date were: Giovanni Martini, operatic tenor; Sarah Bernhardt, Cisterne actress; Samuel Warren Abbott, pioneer in public health education; James A. Garfield, statesman; Leopold Damrosch, musical conductor; and Frank McCann, actor.

To find what the stars have in store for you tomorrow, select your birthday star and read the corresponding paragraph. Use any time left over for other things.

WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 23

LIBRA (Sept. 24-Oct. 23)—Place yourself on a rigid timetable or you will find that you have more to do than time in which to do it. SCORPIO (Oct. 24-Nov. 23)—There seems to be the limit to your current success potential. You may accomplish now anything which feeds doing.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 23-Dec. 23)—Wisdom and foresight, combined with keen, intuitive judgment, will help you to make the right decision today.

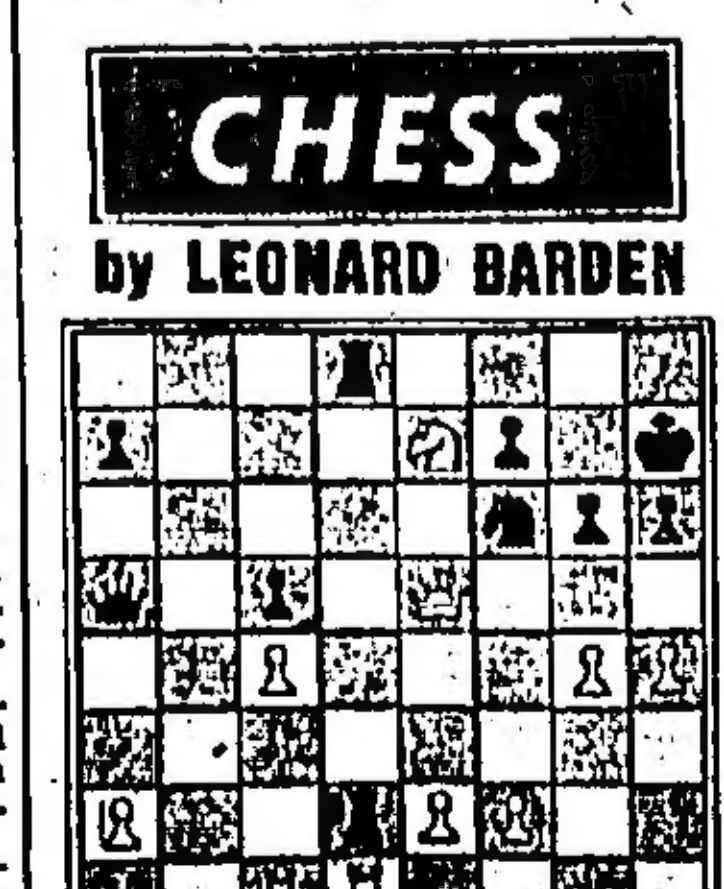

CAPRICORN (Dec. 23-Jan. 20)—Be alert to any new and exciting opportunity which is offered. Be ready to jump into any new action.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 21-Feb. 19)—Lucky breaks can make all the difference between success and failure. Be sure you are thoroughly alert.

PISCES (Feb. 20-Mar. 20)—Confidential matters—perhaps a legacy from an unexpected source—are all in today's panorama. Partnering business is expected to prosper.

TAURUS (Apr. 21-May 21)—If you are hunting a new job, your chances of finding it today are excellent. Health aspects and success result in excellent results for you.

GEMINI (May 22-June 21)—Today begins a four-day cycle of exceptional good fortune. Be sure that you take full advantage of it. CANCER (June 22-July 21)—The stars are turned in your favour and you must do everything to see that you benefit from this good luck. LEO (July 22-Aug. 23)—You can come out on the winning side today, so put forth all your

ANNE
SHARPLEYThe most baffling
135 minutes
of my life...

"WHAT'S American football?" I asked in a pre-Royal Tour panic when it was announced that the Queen was going to see a match during her trip to North America.

It couldn't be the same as those glum but splendid wet Saturday afternoons I used to spend watching Third Division North.

Vague impressions of young men with shoulders like Cadillacs and enormous helmets were not going to help much towards an authoritative write-up when the Queen, 50,000 Americans and I sat down to watch Maryland and North Carolina Universities play each other on October 18.

"Ring up one of the American buses and see if they have a game going on," someone suggested.

They had.

The Greatest

It turned out to be the biggest, the greatest buzz of a football game that America-in-Europe can provide. And I'm still trying to understand why.

Sickeningly aware of how difficult it is to measure up to a great moment if you don't know what it's all about, I was informed after the most puzzled two hours and a quarter of my life—"You have just witnessed Euro-American football history."

I had seen the London Rockets defeated by the Burtonwood Bullets 13-7 at the Sports Stadium in Hayes.

So here, for a small, privately circulated history book is what I think happened.

First thing you need for American football is a supply of hot-dogs. These should float non-stop over and between the heads of the crowd at the rate of two hot-dogs to one head—always mysteriously passing backwards and forwards along the rows.

You need lots of white lines all over the field and lots of little white notices, with numbers on them, to dot about. Then you need players. About enough for four English soccer matches will do if you throw in all the umpires and attendants.

Dress them in funky's breeches, gorilla's shoulders and Martian helmets.

Packed Buses

The teams arrive, shouting and chanting, in very packed buses, and run out on to the field with a high-stepping gait to do exercises. These exercises are the most tiring part of the game.

What are the qualifications for an American football player? "Big and stoopid," said the man on my left. "Fast and intelligent," said the man on my right.

You need no less than seven referees and referee-types. They form a sort of third team—the one that actually always wins.

TOMORROW

Soccer: 1st Division: S. China v. CAA (Club) 1955 v. Singapore (B. St.) both matches at 5.30 p.m. Reserve Division: RAY v. Police (Navy) at 5.30 p.m. Interport: Combined Services v. Singapore at Fanning.

I WATCH THE BULLETS MAKE 'HISTORY' AT HAYES

They wear spectacular striped shirts and white breeches, out of the rear pocket of which spills a big red hanky. They are always throwing this red hanky about, and when it hits the ground the playing stops.

They have lots of umpiring devices like whistles as well. But best of all is a contraption which looks like two enormous lollipop sticks, held together by a chain exactly ten yards long.

This device is always being rushed on to the field because the distance of 10 yards is terribly important—and nobody seems able to pace it out or judge the distance without measuring it exactly.

In the grandstand is a band which, when the ball is kicked, gives a drum-roll ending in a drum-crash when the ball lands. This is because the ball so seldom moves at all that the event is worth nothing.

The London Rockets are wearing their home-playing uniform, which is blue and gold.

They have another which is different for away matches. Some of the players have their helmets glued, which is exotic, but a bit upsetting as they look so like brass bed-knobs.

The Burtonwood Bullets have white helmets, red trousers and shirt and 30 pounds weight of padding which gives them the appearance of rather strange crustaceans.

There are 66 players on the field but only 22 play; the rest are reserves.

London kick off with a ball the size that any member of the two teams could swallow.

Everyone on the field flings himself on to a pile—the same one. The umpires go berserk. "Penalty!" I ask. "Nope, it's a first down."

Kick off again. Everyone throws himself on to a pile again. "Penalty!" I ask. "Nope. Second down."

"Why do they keep huddling together?" I ask. The teams

keep getting into clusters and bending down, staring at the grass with the absorption of a group studying a rare botanical specimen.

"They're planning what to do next," I am told.

Somebody in one of the clusters has had an idea. A boy from Burtonwood decides to give up this flinging on a pile and do some running. He runs 20 yards and it is, it seems, a touch-down.

Most Unusual

"That's most unusual," says everyone. And it is. It didn't happen again for ages. They just kept flinging themselves into piles with the fervour of Hindu widows committing suicide instead.

"It's a very artificial game," said the man on my left. "You couldn't pay me to see it," he added, watching it just the same.

"Why do they kick the ball to the opposing team?" I asked, as a rather puzzling feature of the game became clear to me.

"In American football you gotta."

"They haven't been beaten since 1952." "This is history, The Rockets just can't be beaten."

Teenagers in Tyrolean hats, earrings, jeans and chunky socks were going off like steam whistles.

Suburban Lawn

The ambulance had the biggest success of the first half. A player was injured and to cheers of "Bring out the meat-wagon," the ambulance roared round the track.

But after the interval the crowd, hot-dog maddened, began to scream for more than two teams just taking headers into heaps.

"Let's Go Rockets. Go, Rockets. GO, GO, GO."

A swaying line of teenage maidens, in swirly skirts with white frills underneath, cheer-led us in shrill unison with "Lean to the Left. Lean to the Right. Stand Up. Sit Down. FIGHT. FIGHT. FIGHT."

Someone started a fight in the back of the grandstand. But that was not what the cheerleaders meant, presumably.

At least three-quarters of the field had not been so much as stepped on—it had all gone on in an area the size of a suburban lawn.

In a tight, jubilant pack Burtonwood ran off the field, their coach carried on their shoulders—the winners.

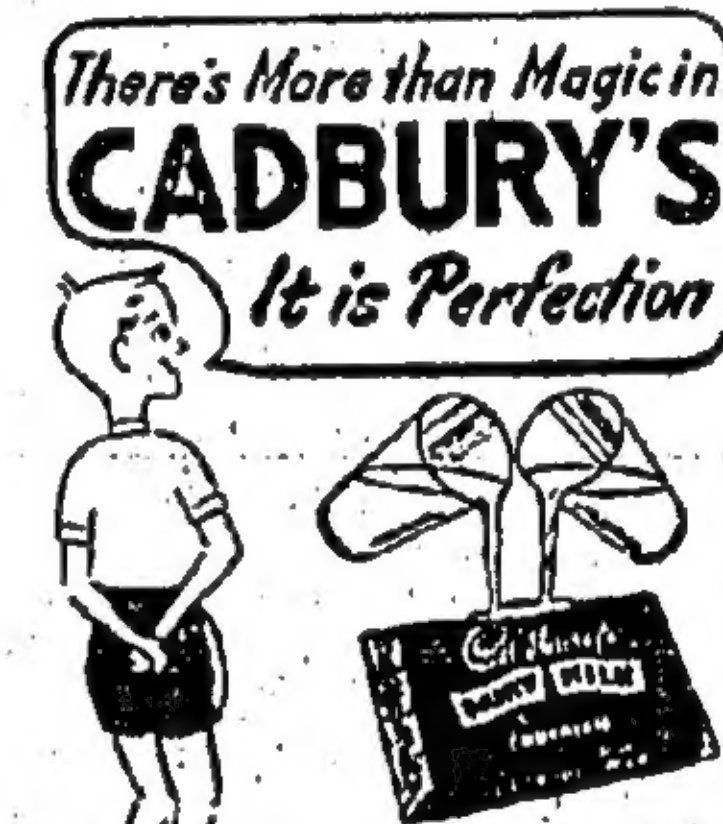

The London Rockets, with dramatic dejection, trailed from the game—the losers. Declaration and woe broke out in the grandstand. "I gotta get drunk tonight," said a pretty young woman in tones of Greek tragedy.

"Like an on alien religion," said a snooty European voice.

It all seemed far, far away from the Third Division North on glum but splendid wet Saturday afternoons. (London Express Service).

Bushfires Destroy 16 Homes Near Sydney

Sydney, By Airmail.
In one hot, blistery day last week when dry westerly gusts reached 70 mph, fierce fires tore through the bushlands on either side of Sydney and in a few hours destroyed 16 homes
and other property worth scores of thousands of pounds.
Hardest hit was a holiday area, Gray's Point, within 20 miles of the city, where 12 homes went up in flames.

With the State facing its worst drought for 15 years,
with the grass outlook under dry and the bushland lush after
so many good seasons, the fire
danger throughout NSW, Queensland and Victoria this year is said to be the greatest ever.

Already the State Government has clamped down on fires of any type outdoors. There can be no burning of rubbish in the backyard, no bush picnics
and boiling the billy, no
barbecues—just no fires of any sort.

The continued dry weather—
there have been no really soaking rains for nearly 12
months—has just about failed
the wheat crop and it is almost certain that NSW this year will be an importer of wheat
instead of a healthy exporter.

Other crops are also suffering.
The prices of greens are high
and graziers say the wool yield
is likely to fall alarmingly.

Airlines Fight

One of the greatest business battles in this country for many years is for control of the privately owned inter-state airlines.

Young Reg Ansett who, a fortnight ago, signed cheques totaling $3,300,000 to take over Australian National Airways as a going concern, turned around a few days later and scooped up shares in Butler Air Transport to increase his total holdings to 60 per cent.

He took over some shares
when he bought out ANA, for that company already had considerable interest in Butler.
Then he went on the open market and bought the rest to give him a controlling interest.

It has now been announced
that another company, unnamed, has made the most generous offer to Butler shareholders to take over complete control of the airline.

It would seem, however,
that Mr Reg Ansett was backing a certain winner when he said the unnamed company's gesture was "sheer nonsense."

Not Selling

"It would be impossible for any company to take over complete control of Butler," he said, "because we already own 60 per cent of the shares and we are not selling."

As the managing director of Ansett Airlines and ANA and with a nice fat finger in Butler Airways, Mr Reg Ansett already controls Australia's greatest commercial transport organization.

Not only does it comprise air-routes covering the continent but includes a string of hotels and the very well-known Pioneer Tourist Service which is now
running in all parts of Australia,
even through the Centre to Alice Springs and on to Darwin.

Butler Airways is mainly concerned with State air-routes
but it does run to Queensland and NSW. It has an up-to-date fleet of Viscounts, Elizabeths and Douglas DC3s.

As the Russian satellite flow
over Sydney one day last week
someone in the crowd said:
"Pretty good, aren't they? Reg Ansett has ordered six of them."

Which is nonsense of course,
but this indicates that Mr Ansett
is very much indeed on the air transport ball.

Scooterised

Because of the number of parking meters in Sydney streets
the City Council is to provide its meter mechanic with a motor scooter.

There are slightly more than 100 meters at present in operation and they have proved so bountiful to Council finances that it is planned to instal
another 500 in streets on the fringe of the city.

Apparently these parking meters are fairly temperamental
for the mechanic has to repair

Good TV Progress

At the end of its first 12 months operation in Sydney
and Melbourne commercial television had made remarkable progress, according to a report
by the Australian Broadcasting Control Board.

The Board said that a high standard of technical efficiency
had been reached, that the hours of viewing were steadily increasing and that there was a substantial increase each month
in the number of receivers in the hands of the public.

However, the Board was not satisfied that all family and children's programmes complied fully with the spirit of special conditions which applied to them or that licensees or advertisers had always given consideration to the object of persuading matter that was suitable for viewing by people of all ages and would not produce undesirable effects on children.

200,000 Sets

It is estimated that there are now nearly 200,000 TV sets in use in NSW and Victoria and that generally the type of picture being received is excellent.

What the Broadcasting Board
report did not reveal, however,
is that the commercial TV
stations are spending money
quicker than one can spend francs in a Paris nightclub; that advertisers are extremely wary of the TV medium—not that they do not believe in it but the higher cost of both production
and viewing for the relatively small number of viewers makes it a catch-as-catch-can proposition and that at least one TV commercial licensee is scratching around for some ready cash. Twenty-one pounds
for 10 seconds of connected time
is still big money for Australian advertisers.

Advertising circles do concede, however, that if the TV
people can hold on, it is only a question of time before they will be lining-up-in-a-queue
waiting for viewing time.

Exporting Snakes

A Queensland man has started an export business in which he has no competition,
and yet is one of Australia's fastest growing dollar industries.

It is the export of deadly
Australian snakes and lizards.
The exporter is Henry Hohnke who says there seems to be a bit of a craze for Australian snakes among Americans.

He returned this week from a hunting expedition with some of the world's most deadly snakes which are needed for export to America next week.

His bag included taipans,
death adders, deadly brown
snakes, and huge but harmless
copperhead snakes.

Henry Hohnke says his biggest customer is Mr. Ernest Ernest who owns a reptile and alligator farm near Los Angeles.

Cheap Labour!

One of the strangest pieces
of news to come our way for many a long day is that an American manufacturing company hopes to take advantage of cheap Australian labour
costs and ship to America
machinery parts it makes in Australia.

Dyke, the 53-year-old Vice-President of the Oliver Corporation of America, which makes earth-moving and agricultural equipment said this in Sydney this week after a visit to New Zealand.

Mr Dyke, who incidentally is a New Zealander, said he believed it would be possible to make certain parts of his company's equipment in this country and ship it to America at a cheaper rate than could be achieved over there.

We have become so used to people complaining about the high labour costs in Australia
that Mr Dyke's announcement comes as an unusual tribute to an American.

JAPAN BUILDING GIANT SUBMARINE?

London, Oct. 22.
A statement by Field
Marshal Viscount Montgomery, deputy Supreme Commander of NATO, that the Japanese were building
a 65,000-ton freight-carrying submarine was dismissed in naval circles
here today.

An Admiralty official said
the Admiralty had no knowledge of such a project.

Viscount Montgomery made
the statement during a speech
at a Trafalgar Day lunch yesterday commemorating the anniversary of Britain's great naval victory of 1805.

Today, the Naval correspondent of the Daily Telegraph
said that unconfirmed reports
earlier this year stated that the Japanese were considering a submersible of possibly 30,000 tons.

MANY PROBLEMS

The newspaper quoted Viscount Montgomery as confirming the displacement figure of 65,000 tons. "I can give you
no other details at the moment," he told the newspaper.
"I can't tell you where I got
the information from, but it is true."

The Naval correspondent
said "A submersible of 65,000
tons would present many problems of navigation and docking."
"But Japan has several deep-water berths which might be used by such a huge boat."

The Japanese have built huge ships before. During the war two 50,000-ton battleships,
each with a main armament of nine 18-inch guns, served as the Japanese flagships in the Battles of Midway and Leyte Gulf.
A third 50,000-ton battleship
was damaged by bombing while in harbour.—Reuter.

SLIGHT RISE IN TRAMP FREIGHTS

London.
Tramp shipping freight rates
have shown a slight but encouraging improvement recently.
The recovery has been stimulated by a seasonal increase in Europe's winter demand for grain, such as the twin-hulled
calamarians and hydrofoil vessels
that have been in the Gulf of Mexico since the outbreak of the war.

Shipping circles are unwilling to forecast how far this improvement in freight rates may go, as the increased demand for tramp ships so far has been concentrated largely on one trade.

They point out, however, that
with so many pre-war and wartime-built vessels laid up, any increase in demand for tramp
ships would have a correspondingly greater effect on the world level of freight rates.

It is estimated that 240,000
gross tons of British shipping, for instance, is now laid up as a result of depressed rates.

QUIET OIL TANKER MARKET

London.
The oil tanker charter market
was, if possible, even quieter
last week than in recent weeks,
and rates remained at depressed
levels.

One broker commented: "We cannot expect any change in these rates until the balance is affected, which would either mean more charterers in the market or fewer tankers available as a result of the continual process of laying-up."

Transatlantic crude oil rates
declined by about 5 points
during the week to British Ministry of Transport Seal-minus 60 per cent from Carib-beans to Britain or the Continent of Europe. This was due to the fact there was scarcely any inquiry and owners had to accept two cargoes of heavy crude oil at the lower rate.

SHIPS LOST

London.
The world merchant fleet lost
108 ships, aggregating 248,635
gross tons, during 1956 as a result of casualty. Lloyd's Register of Shipping statistics show that this represented 0.24
per cent of total world tonnage.
British casualties were 24
vessels, totalling 22,720 tons, or 0.17 per cent of the U.K. fleet.

LONDON'S BIGGEST BOAT SHOW

London.
Show records have been broken three months
ahead by the Fourth
National Boat Show,
which will open on New Year's Day in London for an 11-day run.

Nearly 250 exhibitors have booked space, making it the biggest exhibition of its kind ever held.

The three floors of Empire
Hall, Olympia, will be filled with more than 200 different craft. There will be ocean racers, cruisers, high-speed
power boats, sailing dinghies,
hydroplanes, water scooters,
floating caravans—a whole vast underworld of boat building and design.

Total Area

Total area of the exhibition,
which is presented by the Daily
Express and the Ship and Boat
Builders' National Federation,
will be nearly 200,000 square feet.

One ocean racer on view will be a new British challenger for next summer's Bermuda Race,
one of the three great ocean
races of the world.

The newest glass-fibre life-boats for liners will make their appearance, so will the newest designs in power and sailing
craft, such as the twin-hulled
calamarians and hydrofoil vessels
that lift right out of the water
at speed.

For Women

The influence of women's tastes will be seen in eye-
catching displays of the latest fashions and accessories for beachwear and holidays afloat.
Motor cruisers nearly 50 feet long will be among the biggest boats in the show, compared with dinghies small enough for a car roof.

Prices will range from £10
to £10,000.

INCREASE IN US MERCHANT FLEET

Washington, Oct. 21.
The United States' privately-owned merchant fleet was increased by 25,000 deadweight
tons last month but had a net
reduction of one vessel, the American Merchant Marine Institute reported today.

One "Super" tanker of 20,000
deadweight tons and one cargo purpose (Wine) tanker of 15,300
deadweight tons were added to the U.S. fleet in September
from new construction.

But three vessels of less tonnage were removed from U.S. flag documentation by sales or transfer abroad during the period.

The U.S. flag privately-owned fleet (Ocean-going vessels of 1,000 gross tons and over) totalled 1,013 vessels on October 1. They totalled
13,019,304 deadweight tons, —

NEW JETTY FOR TANKERS

London.
Tankers will be able to discharge up to 8,000 tons of crude oil an hour from British Petroleum Company's new jetty
at Finner, Loch Long, when it is completed by autumn next year.

The new jetty is about half a mile south of B.P.'s present tanker jetty and installation. It will have two shore arms, each 180 feet long (60 metres). One arm will carry a road-way for light vehicles and the other a pipe-track.

Oil discharge will be through
two 24-inch (70cm) pipelines
connecting with four new storage tanks now being built and the four tanks at the present installation. All the tanks will be linked through the existing pump-house to the 57-mile (92km) pipeline to B.P.'s Grangemouth refinery on the Firth of Forth.

THE ASTURIAS

Southampton.
The 31-year-old liner Asturias,
of 22,445 gross tons, which has carried thousands of emigrants
and servicemen, is to be broken up at Fasland on the Clyde. She ran formerly a luxury service
between Southampton and South America.

Another Southampton troop-
ship, the 9,523 gross tons Empire
Ken, built in 1926 as the German liner Ubona, will soon be broken up.

Shriners' Donation To Cripples' Hospital

Shriners from the Afti Temple
Divan of Tacoma, Washington, who are on a visit here,
donated a bed to the Sandy Bay Crippled Children's Consultation Hospital this morning.

On behalf of the visitors, Mr
Chester A. Hogan, Illustrations
Potential of the Afti Shrine Temple, handed a cheque that will pay for the expenses for the coming year for a handicapped child who will occupy the new bed.

The cheque was presented to Mr George Jones, President of the Dragon Oaks Shrine Club
in Hongkong and Mr Jones,
in turn, handed the cheque to the President of the Relief Society, Mr Chan Nam-cheung.
Mr Hogan headed a group of 41 Shriners who toured the hospital. They visited 54
young handicapped children
and showed particular interest in four-year-old Fan Kau-chol, the boy who is suffering from tuberculosis
of the spine and who is occupying the bed donated
by the Dragon Oaks Shrine Club of Hongkong.

The picture above shows one of the young patients wearing a Shriners' Fox during today's visit.

Britain's Sudden Change Of Attitude Breaks Deadlock

The End Of Imperial Preference?

This does not mean that Britain is not willing to talk about agricultural trade or to meet, at some future date, associations with the marketing arrangements made by the others. But it does mean that Britain reserves the final right to protect her own agriculture by any means necessary.

After Europe, the idea might be applied to the Commonwealth. This, at least, is the belief of New Zealand's director-general of Agriculture, Edward Fawcett.

He predicted last week that next year's Commonwealth trade talks in Ottawa would result in the replacement of Imperial preferences by a full-scale Empire common market.
